ACC Polearm Duels Rules

Discipline-specific scoring, rounds and fight procedures

These rules govern ACC Polearm Duels and supplement the ACC General Rules, which apply in full. The General Rules remain the foundation for fighter conduct, equipment, prohibited target areas and actions, safety, and sanctions. If these discipline rules do not specify a matter, the General Rules apply.

In these rules, “List Marshal” and “List Referee” refer to the same official, called the maréchal de lice in French. “Points Referees” score the fighters’ actions; the Head Points Referee receives their scores and reports the round results.

1. Polearm-specific rules

- All weapon and armour requirements in the ACC General Rules apply to polearms.
- Strikes may be made with the polearm’s edge or haft. Thrusting or stabbing actions with any part of the polearm are strictly prohibited.
- A fighter may grab an opponent’s polearm haft while grappling. Grabbing the blade or weapon head is prohibited.
- All target-area restrictions and other prohibited actions in the ACC General Rules remain in force.

2. Scoring

Scoring action	Points
Valid strike with the polearm edge or haft	1 point
Valid fist, elbow, headbutt, knee, or kick strike	1 point
Disarm	3 points to the opponent
Successful, validated takedown	3 points

A valid strike must be delivered with impact and must comply with the ACC General Rules. The Points Referees are the sole judges of whether a strike is valid, except for the controlled strike used to validate a takedown; the maréchal de lice clearly signals that action.

3. Takedowns and ground fighting

3.1 Takedown validation

A successful takedown is worth 3 points as one action, including its validating strike. The fighter who initiated the takedown must establish a dominant position and clearly demonstrate an unblocked strike to the downed opponent’s upper body, head, or arms. The validating strike does not need to be forceful; a controlled, sportsmanlike demonstration is sufficient and will be recognized by the maréchal de lice.

A takedown that is defended does not score if the fighter who initiated it cannot demonstrate the validating strike from a dominant position. The takedown and validating strike are not scored separately; together they are one 3-point action.

3.2 Dominant position

A fighter is in a dominant position when they have no more than two points of support on the ground, such as both feet, or one foot and one hand. Each hand, foot, or knee on the ground counts as a support point. A fighter lying prone is treated as having more than two points of support and is not in a dominant position. The polearm haft does not count as a support point. A knee placed on the downed opponent’s abdomen does not count as an additional support point.

3.3 Ground-fighting limit

Ground fighting is permitted for no more than five seconds from the moment either fighter reaches the ground, regardless of striking or other activity. At the end of those five seconds, the maréchal de lice halts the ground exchange and orders both fighters to stand. Fighting resumes only on the maréchal de lice’s command.

Strikes during ground fighting do not score as ordinary 1-point strikes. The only scoring ground action is a validated takedown: the controlled, unblocked strike to the upper body, head, or arms is part of that single 3-point action. All ground-fighting restrictions in the ACC General Rules continue to apply.

3.4 Non-dominant position

During ground fighting, a fighter who is not in a dominant position may not strike their opponent. They must focus on grappling and protecting themselves to defend against or neutralize the opponent's strikes.

3.5 Unsafe positioning

Presenting the polearm's point toward an opponent in an estoc or thrusting guard is prohibited for safety reasons. A fighter may not deliberately present or interpose a non-target area of the body to block a strike or provoke an illegal strike. This is unsafe behaviour and may be sanctioned by the maréchal de lice under the ACC General Rules.

4. Clinch and separation

Clinch work is permitted. If neither fighter strikes for five seconds during a clinch, the maréchal de lice separates them and commands them to resume. Fighters must wait for that command before restarting.

5. Disarms and weapon recovery

A disarm awards 3 points to the opponent. A weapon dropped deliberately or unintentionally counts as a disarm. A weapon that breaks during the bout also counts as a disarm and awards 3 points to the opponent.

When the maréchal de lice sees a disarm, they clearly halt the fight and notify the Points Referees. The fighter may retrieve the weapon. The maréchal de lice then re-centres both fighters and, when ready, commands them to resume. Neither fighter may restart before that command.

A broken weapon may not be used again under the ACC General Rules. Any replacement weapon must be inspected and approved before the bout resumes.

6. Rounds and bout result

A duel begins with two rounds, each lasting up to two minutes. The Points Referees assigned to each fighter record that fighter's valid scoring actions for each round. The scores from the referees assigned to one fighter are averaged; if the average is not a whole number, it is rounded down before being submitted to the Head Points Referee. The fighter with the higher total score wins the round. An equal total is a drawn round.

At the end of the second round, the Head Points Referee communicates the results to the maréchal de lice and ACC officials.

- The fighter who wins both opening rounds wins the duel.
- A third round is held if each fighter has won one of the first two rounds.
- A third round is also held if both fighters have drawn both of the first two rounds.
- If one fighter wins one round and the other round is drawn, there is no third round; the fighter who won the round wins the duel.
- If the third round is drawn, a final 30-second round is held. If that round is also drawn, the duel is declared a draw (match nul).

7. Commands and enforcement

Only the maréchal de lice may separate fighters or command them to resume fighting. Fighters must obey all orders and must not start or resume before the maréchal de lice's command. Ignoring an order may result in a warning or other sanction under the ACC General Rules.

The ACC General Rules' warning and penalty framework applies to Polearm Duels. The maréchal de lice may stop or interrupt the bout whenever necessary to protect the fighters, enforce the rules, or restore safe conditions.
